Caleb Bartel represents clients facing high-stakes business disputes, class action defense, and complex litigation. He has represented clients in state courts, federal courts, and arbitrations. He has broad experience managing all aspects of a case, from pleadings to appeal, and has appeared on behalf of clients on numerous occasions in a diverse array of legal settings.

Before joining Hueston Hennigan, Mr. Bartel worked in the Los Angeles office of Irell & Manella, focusing on securities fraud and class action defense while also representing clients in a wide variety of other matters. He later joined the law firm Miller Barondess, where he practiced in the field of complex business litigation.

While in law school, Mr. Bartel served as managing editor of the UCLA Law Review and as chief articles editor of the Pacific Basin Law Journal.
